Financial economics is the branch of economics characterized by a "concentration on monetary activities", in which "money of one type or another is likely to appear on both sides of a trade". Its concern is thus the interrelation of financial variables, such as share prices, interest rates and exchange rates, as opposed to those concerning the real economy.

But one thing you can do is start investing on your baby's behalf in a brokerage account. If you start buying quality stocks when your child is first born, you'll give that money a lot of time to grow. Then, as your child gets older, you can add stocks to that account together so that your child learns to pick stocks and why it's important to stay invested in them for the long haul.

Financial modeling is the task of building an abstract representation (a model) of a real world financial situation. This is a mathematical model designed to represent (a simplified version of) the performance of a financial asset or portfolio of a business, project, or any other investment. Typically, then, financial modeling is understood to mean an exercise in either asset pricing ...
